

Greek Roots Vocabulary List 1

Mrs. Alana Haughaboo

anthropophobia	(n.)	aversion to man.
philanthropy	(n.)	a desire to improve the material, social, and spiritual welfare of humanity, especially through charitable activities; general love for, or benevolence toward, the whole of humankind misanthrope	(n.)	somebody who hates humanity, or who dislikes and distrusts other people and tends to avoid them bibliomaniac	(n.)	an extreme fondness for books, especially the collecting of them euphonious	(adj.)	having a pleasant sound cacophony	(n.)	an unpleasant combination of loud, often jarring, sounds; the use of harsh unpleasant sounds in language, e.g. for literary effect megaphone	(n.)	a device shaped like a funnel, used to channel the voice in one direction and increase its volume microscopic	(adj.)	extremely small; invisible without the use of a microscope; very thorough and meticulous macroscopic	(adj.)	large enough to be seen and examined without the aid of magnifying equipment; relating to or concerned with large units, comprehensive telegraph	(n.)	a method of long-distance communication by coded electric impulses transmitted through wires bibliophile	(n.)	a collector of books symphony	(n.)	Harmony of sound, esp. of musical sounds; concord, consonance; archaic meaning: harmony or agreement of sounds or colors; music in parts, sung or played by a number of performers with pleasing effect; concerted or harmonious music; a performance or strain of such music.
megalomaniac	(n. and adj.)	one with: an excessive enjoyment in having power over other people and a craving for more of it; a psychiatric disorder in which the patient experiences delusions of great power and importance skeptical	(adj.)	tending not to believe or accept things but to question them; marked by a doubting attitude aphonic	(adj.)	having no sound or pronunciation, non-vocal.